

TEXT COMMENTARY

"[...] The fight against climate change requires behavioral changes to be made in both businesses and people; it's impossible for it to occur without affecting anyone. Action will have to be taken on electricity transmission lines, especially if we aspire to the electrification of new sectors such as road transport, massive energy storage devices that make the use of renewable energies viable, new solar or wind power plants that will have an effect on certain natural environments and a whole series of actions that will only be possible when accompanied by a change in the public's mentality. In a democratic society, it's not possible for the Government to act in a specific direction without a favorable social consensus. And not only in terms of the words, but also attitudes".
